

Gender, Conflict, and Peacebuilding

This course explores the gender dimensions of armed conflict and peacebuilding. Engaging with empirical research, policy analysis, and theoretical approaches we will examine the social constructs of femininity and masculinity and how they relate to the experience of armed conflict and the roles that men and women take on in processes of conflict, militarism, and peacebuilding. We will review critical debates and theoretical frameworks including analyses of gendered discourses on war and peace, feminist perspectives, and gendered continuums of violence to understand multiple gendered perspectives and ways of knowing about the causes and consequences of armed conflict.

Mollie Pepper | T/Th 10:20-12:30 | CHID 250D | I&S | Summer 2018