Summer Internships in Seattle

CHID 399A/B & 498C Local/Global Engagements

Instructors: Tamara Meyers & Erin Clowes

The CHID 2014 Local/Global Internships in Seattle provides a unique opportunity for selected undergraduates to earn full-time, academic credit while exploring the connections between global ideas and local work. Over an 8-week period, students will both work in local organizations with a transnational focus and participate in seminars, which will provide a space for reflection on how to incorporate theory into practice.

This is an accessible option, which fulfills the Cultural and Historical Engagements CHID major requirement under the Local/Global Engagements course description. This 12-credit program enables students to have a transnational experience without leaving Seattle. As they build relationships within our local community, students are encouraged to be self-reflexive of their own local position/situation/context while thinking critically about their work experience and exploring the links between local and global systems. In these internships, students will trace local and global intersections in areas such as transnational identity politics, human rights, immigration, indigenous issues, legal rights, and violence.
