

Theories in the Study of Religion

CHID 380A

Summer 2013 | Instructor: Seth Allen Perry | I&S | CHID Gateways & Ideas in the World Credit
Offered jointly with JSIS B 380

This four-week religious studies boot-camp will run the gamut of approaches to the study of religion, examining the variety of theories and methodologies that have constituted religious studies as a field. Historical, anthropological, sociological, psychological, feminist, and postmodernist approaches will all be covered, and in our last few classes we will take up readings specifically focused on the various ways scholars of religion imagine their roles with respect to their subjects and the academy.
